Formulate targeted interventions that better meet kids' needs

- Quantifies the impact of traumatic experiences on school-based functioning in order to help you generate specific interventions.
- Completed by a classroom teacher or other educator familiar with the student's typical behavior and day-to-day functioning.
- Evaluates both academic functioning and resiliency in the same measure.
- Four clinical scales (Behavior, Emotional, Physiological, Academic), one index (Trauma Index), and a supplemental Resiliency scale paint a broad picture of students' functioning. Two validity scales are also provided.
- Critical items help identify children who may need immediate follow-up or intervention.
- Designed for use by educational diagnosticians, school counselors, school psychologists, school nurses, community mental health providers, school administrators, and pediatricians.
- Can be used immediately by teachers while development of the full instrument, which will include parent and self-reports, is ongoing.
- Developed by noted school psychologist and educational neuropsychologist Steven G. Feifer, DEd.
