Find out quickly if their anxiety, stress, and fear are pandemic-related

Since the pandemic began, students and their families have had to adapt to working and learning from home; quarantining from friends and family; and fearing for the health and safety of themselves and their loved ones.

At school, students may exhibit symptoms such as anxiety, stress, and fear. Finding out if they are struggling is the first step in helping school professionals get back to doing what they do best—helping children.

Developed by FAR, FAM, and FAW author Steven G. Feifer, DEd, the PASS-12 allows you to assess the impact of a pandemic on school-based functioning, specifically for children who are attending or re-entering in-person school. This parent rating form provides information to help school professionals make important decisions.

- Entirely digital, the PASS-12 is administered and scored via PARiConnect, our online testing platform, in about 5 minutes.

- Raw scores and percentiles are provided for quick and easy interpretation; follow-up with a more comprehensive assessment is recommended if the total raw score falls within an elevated range.

- Intervention recommendations and resources are provided in the Score Report, and the free Technical Paper provides administration guidance.
